

CHARACTER BUILDING LESSONS

CARL SOMMER

THE SLY FOX AND THE CHICKS

About the Book

Mama and Papa have always told their chicks never to have anything to do with strangers. But the sly fox disguises himself as a little lamb, and tries to trick the chicks into going with him. His early attempts fail because Clucky listens to Papa and Mama.

The fox finally succeeds by promising delicious corn to lure some of the chicks. After a horrifying experience, Clucky's sister Wendy escapes and realizes the importance of always listening to her parents and never talking to strangers.

To help protect our children from unscrupulous strangers in today's society, Carl Sommer teaches the importance of trust, safety, and obedience to parents.

Being Deceived

Secretly, the sly fox dreamed of catching little chicks and eating them. And he would have done so long ago if it had not been for Papa Rooster and a great big dog named Gruffy.

Be careful that strangers don't deceive you.

Obeying and Trusting Parents

Papa Rooster and Mama Hen taught Clucky, Penny, and the other chicks to stay away from the sly fox. They also warned, "Never talk to strangers, even if they are friendly."

Clucky always answered, "I will never talk to strangers!"

Be wise and always obey your parents.

Being Ridiculed for Doing Right

"Mmmmmm! Mmmmm!" said Penny. "This is yummy food!"

"It sure is!" said another chick. "Clucky sure was foolish for not coming with us. He's going to have to eat that old dried food."

Then they all laughed at Clucky for being so foolish. Clucky was determined to obey his parents. Many times others will ridicule you when you want to do that which is right. Never give in to them.

Never Listen to Strangers

"Thank you, Mr. Lamb," said the chick as it bent down to taste the corn. "Thank you for being such a nice friend."

All at once the fox leaped at the chick. And with one hungry gulp, he swallowed it.

The chicks that listened to the sly fox thought he was nice. Finally the true nature of the fox was revealed—he ate one of them.

Never listen to strangers. You never know what they will do.

Strangers Can Deceive

One of the chicks said to Gruffy, "He ate my friends."

The sly fox lied and said, "Did you see me eat them?"

"No, I didn't see you," said the chick, "but I know you did."

"There you have it," said the fox to Gruffy. "You know kids. They just make up stories."

People who want to harm children are very deceptive. Always listen to your parents—they love you and want to protect you.
